Elba High Accredited Others - No

An accreditation survey by State Superintendent of Education Leroy Brown shows that twenty-seven percent of the grades in the public schools in Alabama are accredited while seventy-three percent of the grades are not accredited.

Elba High School has been accredited since May of 1967 by the State and also by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

Superintendent Elmer Taylor reports that a request for accreditation for the Elementary School was asked for Monday, January 24. On February 22, the State Department of Education will review the Elementary School for State accreditation. State accreditation is expected in April of this year.

When asked about accreditation of the Middle School, Mr. Taylor explained that it won't be introduced for accreditation until the new buildings are completed, which should be by May of this year. Upon completion, an accreditation request will be submitted to the State Accreditation Board in September of 1972.

Cotton, once the King of Alabama and Coffee County farm income, only brought in $20,000 in 1971, and became even less significant as it fell far behind in total revenue to 12 other Alabama farm products. Government payments and lease of allotments on cotton amounted to $251,969.

A total of 26,000 acres of peanuts were planted in 1971 and yielded an average of 1700 pounds per acre for an income of $6,000,000 to become the new leader in farm products.

Soybeans were planted on 2236 acres and yielded 28 bushels per acre for a total of $800,000; government payment amounted to $320,937.

Hogs and pigs brought a total of $2,500,000, while cattle and calves brought $2,700,000. Coffee County income of $675,000.

Elba Youth Awaiting New Kidney

Arthur Mount, 19 son of Mrs. Darcie Lee Mount, who had been in University Medical Center in Birmingham since December 26, was transferred to Veterans Hospital January 18, 1972. There he has had his two diseased kidneys removed and is now awaiting recovery from that operation so he can be operated on once more to receive a kidney from his mother.

Doctors speculate he has an 85% chance of recovery with a kidney from someone as closely related as his mother, where he would stand only a 50% chance of recovery if the kidney was donated by someone who was not related.

Right now, Arthur is on a kidney machine, and will be using it until he has recovered enough that he can receive his new kidney.

Pulp And Paper Industry Booming

The South's fast-growing pulp and paper industry is pumping more than two billion dollars a year to the economy of the thirteen Southern states, according to a new economic survey by Southern Forest Industries, Atlanta, Ga.

The pulp and paper industry purchased more than one billion dollars worth of pulpwod from private landowners last year, and its annual payroll was another $1.09 billion, explained Southern Forest Institute executive vice-president George E. Kelly. "Combined, the industry accounted for $2.09 billion added to the economic well-being of this region—nearly $35 for every man, woman and child in the South."

Since 1968, the survey showed, ten new pulp and paper mills have been built, bringing to 110 the number of mills now in the South. Another four mills are now under construction. The mills and associated manufacturing operations employ almost 127 thousand workers and have a combined daily pulp and paper output of 1.5 million tons, making capacity of more than 84 thousand tons. In addition, the economic survey showed almost two thousand professional foresters are currently employed by the pulp and paper industry managing its 52 million acres of Southern forest land and growing 1.5 million tons of trees, one of nature's few renewable resources. Last year, the industry planted more than 455 million new trees and supplied an additional 38 million seedlings to private landowners to help provide forests for tomorrow.

Besides growing wood for more than five thousand different kinds of products, forests also provide natural beauty, supply wildlife habitat, control erosion, protect watersheds, offer recreational opportunities, and provide oxygen for clean, fresh air in the battle against pollution.

Of special interest, Kelly noted, is the pulp and paper industry's activities in the areas of recreation and wildlife management on its land. According to the survey, more than 27 million acres of industry-owned forest land in the South are open to the public for hunting, fishing, and other outdoor recreation. Approximately two million 700 thousand acres of forest are being managed in cooperation with various state wildlife agencies in organized wildlife management areas. And 267 company forest recreation areas have been established throughout the South for public use.

"Since 1968, the last year we made a major economic survey, pulpwod purchases by the South's pulp and paper industry have risen 24 percent, total employment has increased seven percent, and annual payrolls are up 24 percent," Kelly said.

"These figures represent major accomplishments of an industry which is here to stay, transforming a basic, renewable resource—trees—into useful products, and at the same time providing jobs, payrolls and other economic benefits to communities throughout the South."

French Club Holds Meeting
The French Club held its January meeting on Tuesday morning in the Elba High School auditorium. Mary Collier, the club "Chef de Chant", led the group in singing "La Marseillaise", the French National Anthem. The roll was called, the minutes were read and approved, and "Student of the Month" nominees were elected. The 9th grade nominee was Sandra Clark; 10th grade, Melanie Carnley; 11th grade, Cyndi Stokes; 12th grade, Mark Vaughan.

Then Mrs. Padgett discussed the ordering of French Club pins and charms and requested that students place their orders this week. She also discussed the possibility of the Club attending the annual convention held in Tuscaloosa but because she had not yet received the necessary information the plans were not finalized. There being no further business the meeting was adjourned. Courtney Cannon Reporter

SENIOR OF THE WEEK
This week our congratulations go to Fredene Lee who was elected "Senior of the Week." Fredene is the daughter of Mrs. Alene B. Lee. Her interests are in football games and her hobbies are piano and sewing. She is a member of the F. H. A. and on the annual staff. She thinks our school is pretty good most of the time but we need more school spirit and less homework. She thinks the school can be improved by more school spirit especially during pep rallies and ballgames. Her pet peeve is people talking about you behind your back. Fredene is studying Beowulf, Typing II, Contemporary Writers, Home Ec. II, P. E., and Study Hall this year. After graduation she plans to attend Troy State University. She is a member of the Methodist Church and participates in M. Y. F.

PEANUT MEETING
All Coffee County farmers have been invited to a peanut and field crops program which is to be held Thursday, February 3, at the New Brockton National Guard Armory. We are fortunate in having three of our Auburn University specialists meeting with us to review the latest recommendations. Those attending are Dr. Walter So-well, Dr. Earl Burns, and Mr. M. C. Bond. The program will begin promptly at 9:00 a.m. and end with a barbecue at 11:45 a.m. Agri - business dealers are making the barbecue dinner possible. I believe this has helped because since these programs were started about five years ago, we have had steady increases in peanut production in Coffee County, days.

COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIPS

I had a letter this week from Dr. Charles F. Simmons, associate dean of the School of Agriculture has a number of scholarships available each year. These are provided by various farm - oriented business companies in the state. Some are available only to freshmen students at Auburn University, and some are restricted to certain programs. But others are for the entire four years. These scholarships range from $500-$1000 a year.

The folks at Auburn would like to see more applicants for these scholarships from qualified boys and girls. Interested boys and girls should write to the following address for an application: Dr. J. T. Hood, Chairman, Scholarship Committee, P.O. Box 111, Auburn University, Auburn.

SOYBEAN MEETING
I don't want to get our farmers in the county confused on various meeting dates. However, for those interested in soybean production, storage, and marketing we have arranged an area meeting to be held in Ozark on Wednesday of this week at 10:00 a.m. This program will be at the Dale County Memorial Library. Specialists from our Auburn University staff will discuss all phases of soybean production, storage and marketing.

Incidentally, we have had a big increase in soybean production in Coffee County the last few years. I think soybean production is fine for folks who have extra land. However, I would not even think about planting soybeans and peanuts on the same farm where my acres for rotation were limited. For the state, though and in certain areas I think soybeans have a wonderful potential.

What should you do?

As a driver, how should you react to the first 15 minutes of a hard rain?

How should you stop at an intersection before making a left turn?

What lane should you use to cross a high-speed bridge?

How should you approach an exit on a high speed road?

Jr., which is now being distributed to students in Elba High School Driver Training program, as part of a continuing effort to make our young people safer, safer drivers.

This booklet emphasizes desirable driving habits and recommends precautionary attitudes for specific situations.

Failure To Accept Warning Causes Deaths

John Smith considers himself lucky to be alive. The paunchy, 42-year-old father of twins has been heart attack, the number one killer in the United States.

However, outside the coronary care unit where he's a patient, more than half of the 670,000 estimated heart attack victims this year will die without getting to a hospital that can give them special coronary care.

According to the Alabama Heart Association, the major reason for these needless deaths is the failure of heart attack victims to recognize or accept the warnings signs that signal the onset of heart attack, and their delay in receiving prompt medical treatment.

When heart attack occurs according to the Alabama Heart Association, these are the usual warning signs or symptoms:

- A prolonged heavy pressure or squeezing pain in the center of the chest behind the breastbone.
- The pain may spread or jaw.
- The pain or discomfort is often accompanied by sweating, vomiting, and shortness of breath may occur.

Sometimes these symptoms may subside, and then return.

One weekend following a heavy lunch, Smith was doing his usual chores around the house when he was struck by chest pains that radiated up into his neck, across his shoulders, and down his arms.

At first he thought he had a bad case of heartburn, but as the pain intensified, after hurried conversation with their family physician to describe the symptoms, Smith was rushed to a hospital and admitted to its coronary care unit.

According to the Alabama Heart Association, which trains personnel to man these installations, the coronary care unit is the most important single development to emerge in the 1960's.

It is estimated that if all heart attack victims who survive the first few hours could receive immediate treatment in these intensive care units specially equipped to treat heart attack, probably 50,000 lives could be saved.

When Smith was admitted to the CCU, one of thousands in hometown hospitals across the country, he entered a special unit designed to treat heart attack victims.

Smith's bed in view of a central nursing station that overlooks all beds in the unit. Like other patients, electrodes from his body to individual monitors over the bed, as his rhythm flashes continuously across the screen, the bleeps lend a reassuring sound to his ears. Should any heart irregularity occur, the monitor will sound an alarm, and in seconds nurses and physicians will be summoned to correct whatever is wrong.

When he is recovered, Smith will be ready to leave the hospital in a shorter time than ever before. He will then be able to resume his regular pattern of activities.

No longer will he consider it just luck that he's alive. For he will be one of the many thousands of Americans who have survived heart attack because his family recognized the early signs of heart attack, and acted quickly in getting him to a hospital where he received the lifesaving benefits of modern coronary care.

Persons admitted to the Elba General Hospital during the period of January 25 through February 1 were the following persons:

Dickinson Concerned With NEW Statistics

Congressman Bill Dickinson

The Republican Congressman is concerned with the NEW statistics of the last fiscal year which showed that the total welfare spending was 16.3 billion dollars, which is an increase of twenty-seven percent over the year before and almost twice the 8.9 billion dollar figure of four years ago.

The number of persons on the welfare rolls increased by seventeen percent.

As the Congressman says, "These statistics tell a story of growing indolence and dependency in our society. Relief began in the 1930's as only a temporary measure. Today welfare is a way of life. Food stamp programs have created a new privileged class of hand-out recipients."

The Congressman says, "It is understandable why the ordinary working man is resentful of the food stamp programs. He buys hamburger in the supermarket while control policies of every educational institution, even private church-supported institutions such as Samford University, Birmingham - Southern College, Oakwood College, and the University of Alabama at Birmingham, are being threatened by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission."

The bill would also substitute federal control of employment practices for those of State and local governments in the appointment and promotion of employees.

Failure to comply with regulations laid down by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission will be punishable by fine and even imprisonment. This legislation completely reverses established principles of American justice by creating a presumption of guilt rather than of innocence. And that most precious of all civil rights—the right of trial by jury—would be denied because for all practical purposes this bill makes the EEOC prosecutor, judge and jury combined, something that is completely contrary to our American system.

Elba High School was left without a head football coach when Coach Atkins resigned to accept the same position at University Military School in Mobile. This is indeed a setback to the football program in Elba, record since coming here in 1967. But, as a former player under him, I know that the winning record is not the only thing Coach Atkins takes with him to Mobile. Elba will be a winning football team next year. It's the things that Coach Atkins taught along with football that the players will miss most.

Permit me, if you will, to relate a personal experience that happened during my senior year in high school. Elba, with a record of 6-0, against Samson, 0-6-1. It was homecoming and it was raining, and we were still in touchdown favorites.

Now you remember! To make a long story short, we were beaten badly by an inferior football team. We were supposedly "out of condition" and lacked a tactical during the game. We (the team) expected a sprint on Monday and a speech about being overconfident. Coach Atkins gave us neither one. In the same tone of voice he used for talks about our wins, he talked about winning again next year, but next week. We did, and had a good season, but that's not the point. Coach Atkins didn't teach us how to lose, but how to "get up when we fell down."

I speak for every player who played under Coach Atkins in saying that we received the best football instruction available anywhere during the past five years. UMS has a winner and Elba has a winning foundation, thanks to Leon Atkins.

Troy State lost its football coach Saturday when Billy Atkins resigned to become defensive backfield coach of the Buffalo Bills. Coach Atkins' resignation was a total surprise to the players and the university. As a matter of fact, I learned of it in the Sunday newspaper. Coach Atkins brought Troy State from "rags to riches" during his seven seasons there, compiling a 53-17-2 overall record. The search is underway for a new head coach, and rumors are that first assistant Phillip Greel is first in line for the job.

Some twenty golfers "waded" around the Elba Country Club links this past Saturday, proving just who the dedicated players are. Club Manager Farrell Buns seemed to be the best "duck" on the course. His drives were going straight for a change, and his putter was very hot. The rest of us used the weather for an excuse.

Plans are being made for many club events for golfers during the spring and summer, especially for the juniors. Although the final schedule won't be announced until the next few weeks, it's time to be practicing if you want a trophy for the case.

Mike Thomas, foreman of the Door Department, is shown here with Silas Simmons, showing off the "new look" at Dorsey Trailers. The "new look" refers to the safety helmet which is now being worn by all Dorsey employees who work in the plant and even by visitors if they must go into the plant.

The safety helmets are now being worn due to the Occupational Safety and Health Act recently passed by Congress which requires industrial workers and anyone else around construction to wear a protective helmet as an aid against accidental head injury.

Trailers is constantly being improved and according to management, every effort is being made to comply with the Occupational Safety and Health Act.
